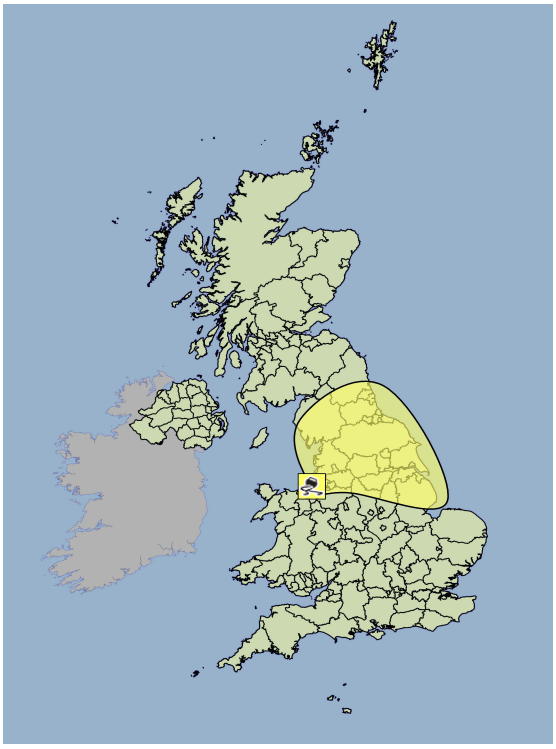
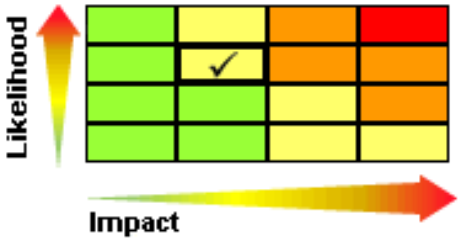
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Heavy showers have affected parts of northern England and the north east Midlands during Saturday. Most of the showers will clear during the evening, though temperatures will quickly fall with roads remaining wet to give the risk of some icy patches overnight, eventually clearing as temperatures rise again on Sunday morning.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Ice

Valid from 20:00 on Sat, 09th Nov 2013 until 09:00 on Sun, 10th Nov 2013

Following heavy showers, icy patches may form on some roads from Saturday evening into Sunday morning.

The public should be aware of the risk of some minor disruption to travel, especially across northern England and the north east Midlands.
